fact, within thirty days we were compelled to double our planned production of this car because of the stupendous demand.

"Every other car in the class of the Jeffery Six has been sold only through extraordinary advertising effort," said fact they are not good cars; it doesn't show that they are not good cars; it fact, it shows the contrary, because no matter how much advertising you put behind a product, the product cannot be sold in proflicable quantities unless it is backed by real, genuine merit. But the fact that the Jeffery Six actually sold itself to such an extent that we were obliged to double our output is evidence of the extraordinary appeal of this car to the intelligent buyer.

"Now-a-days the car-buying public—the woman part of it as well as the man part—knows pretty well what it wants. When a car is literally mapped up on sight, you can feel it is giving the intelligent public just what that public wants—and a little bit more! The Jeffery Six to a limited extent." Conditioned Mr. Hurley, "but not because of the superiority.

"At present we are advertising the Jeffery Six to a limited extent." Conditioned Mr. Hurley, "but not because we want to increase the sales. We cannot do that because the demand is already much greater than the supply. Our advertising is designed entirely to make the success of the Jeffery Six to a limited extent."
